WHY IS FINANCIAL LITERACY IMPORTANT?

Financial literacy is used to describe a person's abilities with money management. Personal finance defines the needed skills to include budgeting, borrowing, and investing. Every person is impacted by their knowledge of financial literacy in their daily life. Gaining financial confidence earlier in life leads to a reduction in stress and improved financial wellness.

Join the Office of Student Financial Literacy in April to gain confidence in the financial realm.

TEACHING FINANCIAL LITERACY IS INCLUSIVE

A study conducted by The Federal Reserve of St. Louis concluded that household income and education are the leading indicators of level of financial literacy. MUSC's student body comes from diverse backgrounds and life experiences.

MUSC followed the U.S. Financial Literacy and Education Commission recommendations (2020) by providing 1:1 financial counseling and financial education tailored to the student population.
